Story

Watching Cristan run was like watching poetry in motion. In practice, the coaches would take turns sprinting in order to push this running sensation. During meets, it gave me great pleasure to call his mile splits because he was always winning by a substantial margin. At times, he would even ask questions or offer other delightful exchanges. There was always a comfort entering meets because you could count on his “1” in the scoring total. Cristan’s carefree personality and cheerful disposition forced his competitors to embrace him; his playful attitude endeared his teammates as well. There was never animosity or rivalry exhibited, rather, a genuine sense of awe and respect for his God-given abilities. Truly, Cristan Duvall is the most talented runner whom I have ever had the pleasure of coaching – a term I use very loosely. –Colin Creel
